

Currently, when you walk to Ryan Heights Playground, you will see barren and neglected landscape with so much potential. Right now, it is considered the highest risk section of the complex. Many parents do not let their kids walk through there to get to school or even to go to the small park structure that's sitting there. We want to change that. Ryan Heights Park and Gardens is getting a major makeover this summer and this is but one of the many components that will attract the community to take a second look at what they have, here.

Our Butterfly Garden

This is a rough draft of how we want the new park to look. It won't simply be a playground anymore. It will contain gardens and places for people to sit and meet their neighbours.
